

Special Election Periods

A patient in her mid 70's was still working and avoiding treatment for stage 4 lung cancer because she could not afford the copays and deductibles she believed she would have to pay if she enrolled in Medicare. After speaking with a Perfiniti agent she learned that she qualified for a Special Election Period if she stopped working and took social security. Perfiniti enrolled the patient into a Medicare Supplement Plan and Part D Drug coverage. The patient was able to seek Chemotherapy and follow up on doctor's appointments that otherwise would have been skipped. This coverage also provided the client (hospital) full payment with no delays in payment and the patient had no patient responsibility.

A patient was referred to Perfiniti by an on-site case manager. The patient recently went through a divorce and was newly diagnosed with heart failure. She was experiencing a significant change in income after the divorce and was worried about being able to afford medical care. After sitting down with the Perfiniti agent she was found to be eligible for QMB (Qualified Medicare Beneficiary). Perfiniti was able to assist her in the approval of QMB, which opened the door for her to enroll in Dual Eligible Medicare Advantage plan. In the end the patient was able to afford medications, medical care and treat her heart condition with no responsibility or out-of-pocket costs.

"My agent has proved to be an invaluable ally in working through the muddy waters of medicare, medicaid and supplemental insurance. She went above and beyond in helping me navigate getting proper coverage and care for my ill and dying mother. She subsequently got me personally, in a proper medicare supplement, following my mothers ordeal. Although I've not had the pleasure of meeting her personally, she's top shelf, by any measure. You should be proud to have her as a representative, as she has become a trusted adviser to me and our family."
